Editors Dispatch: As a subscriber to your valuable paper allow me a small space in your next issue—having bought a piece of land within ten miles of Richmond, in Henrico county—to ask some of your correspondents to be kind enough to answer

First. What is the custom or rule when land is let on shares, the tenant finding seed and labor, the owner paying taxes? Second. What is the basis upon which the following questions: real estate is charged. Is the price for which it was sold considered the real value, and assessed accordingly? and when due?

Any information on the above will ablige for a long time. The best cotton crop made that we have gathered in many years. Our people went regularly to hard work, and began to save right at the beginning of the year. Old and young, men and women, all felt the necessity of doing something, of making something, and behold the result! It can no longer be said our lands are worn out, our labor-system is demoralized, cliout, our labor-system is demoralized, climates have changed, nor any more of these excuses be urged for not making big crops. The result of this year's industry, patience, economy, and perseverance has convinced us that fortunes are yet in store for the frugal farmers of this country.

Many, many acres of land have brought a bale of cotton—the general average is largely over a haif-bale per acre. It only needed just that sort of determination to do that has brought all this good fortune to our people. Our lands, as readily as in former times, yield up their wealth to those who till them with vim and constancy, and they are rich and varied in their products.

This year's crop has put our people ahead, and will enable them to diversity their crops. It needed a little independence and freedom from the oppression of debt to start them in this line, but once in the way they are then on the sure road to success Much preparation is being made to mise vegetables for the early western market. Our people are going into the strawberry, bean, and Irish potato business. Truck patches are being prepared all around in this neighborhood.

All this good fortune to our planters has had its good effect also upon our town. Merchants are doing a larger and better business this season than ever before. They laid in rather a larger stock than usual in the fall, but thought it sufficient for the trade, while in fact they bave sold out, ordered again and sold out, and now are selling the fourth stock to a lively trade.

Some More Chronology.
